

Abstract

Facelift Surgery: Achieving Optimal Results in An Asian population

The Asian population has unique anatomical and skeletal characteristics that pose special considerations when performing facelift surgery. Attention needs to be paid to these details to prevent the occurrence of unfavorable results. The presenter will share relevant planning considerations and technical tips in this video demonstration of facelift in Asian patients.